U of M Extension animal scientist Marcia Endres and her students are researching cow comfort. They work with local farmers to improve bedding and housing, which adds to a cow’s well-being. More comfort means more milk production for the state’s $2 billion dairy industry. Turns out a comfortable cow is a cash cow. So the search continues.

More at umn.edu